YOUR INTERGROUP OFFICE

Administrative Duties

By: Ashley R.

At Northeast Florida Intergroup, the administrative role involves supporting the operational and organizational functions of the nonprofit in service to local Alcoholics Anonymous (AA) groups. Responsibilities include managing communications between the Intergroup office and affiliated AA groups, coordinating meeting schedules, and maintaining accurate group contact information, events, and literature inventory records. The administrator also oversees the production and distribution of the “When & Where” pamphlets, which provide information on local AA meeting times and locations in print and digital formats.

Additional duties include performing routine clerical tasks such as answering phone calls, responding to emails, filing, and data entry. The administrator supports financial tracking and reporting by logging contributions from AA groups, processing literature orders, and reconciling monthly financial records in coordination with the treasurer. The role also involves preparing for committee meetings by printing agendas and minutes and ensuring timely follow-up on action items.

GRATITUDE TURNS THE KEY

BY: MARIE N. | PUERTO VALLARTA, MEXICO

APRIL 2010

WHEN I was sober for a few months, I heard that if I did nothing except Step work each morning for a few minutes, that would be OK. So I did, and it was. Now I know that prayer and meditation are the key to relieving the lifelong fear and dread that had consumed me. And they are the key to removing the rest of my character defects.

Gratitude turns the key. By deciding to promptly thank God for any and every situation he brings into my life, I short-circuit my dangerous faulty thinking. Then I can look past the immediate drama right to its acceptance, and sometimes, if God grants me the grace, to its approval--not just in words, but genuinely. If I look for the good and I look inside myself, I will always find something of value in the external situation.

Today I try to look inside first, because I've made the decision to trust God's word and the Promises in the Big Book--not sometimes, but always. I ask that whatever I find that is not a spiritual value, such as selfishness, resentment or dishonesty, be removed, and I ask for the right thought or action. In this way, God is removing character defects that get in the way of my usefulness to him.

Then I look for the good in any bad situation, and ask that God use it for his purposes, not mine. Either I get a miracle and the situation clears of itself or I find a pesky defect has returned and I'm more ready than ever to work Steps Six and Seven.

In this way, in spite of myself, I have been led to a happy marriage to a kind, loving man who encourages and supports my program of recovery. My once-strained family relationships are now mostly close and joyous, and I've cultivated rich friendships with like-minded people. (cont.)

My resentments and terror have given way to peace, my fears are being replaced by faith and my despair is changing to joy.

The Eleventh Step helped me back to the love and trust I had in my youth. But I'm not returning in innocence. I know that life has its heights and its depths and its cycles. That's simply life.

Now I'm secure in knowing that a Higher Power loves and cares for me, always and in all ways.

And now I have faith that no matter what the situation looks like for the moment, there's always some good in it, and that it or I will change for the better if I clearly choose it. © Grapevine
